SIGN-IN IS ON THE AIR!

The College has been working with WJZ-TV of Baltimore in producing a series of 28-minute TV programs, which are now being shown each Sunday morning at 7:30 a.m. on Channel 13.

The 65-week series, which was developed to appeal to the general public as well as hearing impaired audiences, covers three broad areas: general education courses (taught by Gallaudet faculty members), a course in manual communication presented by Willard Madsen, and interviews with deaf persons.

Both signing and captioning are used. Viewers are encouraged to write their reactions to Mr. Tom Dooley, who is the producer-director of the program, at WJZ-TV in Baltimore, Maryland.

COURSES IN DEAF STUDIES ADDED TO CURRICULUM AT GALLAUDET

Gallaudet has been gradually adding courses specifically related to the deaf and deafness to the undergraduate program in order to expand the students' understanding of their own handicap as well as to open up the problems of the deaf to the hearing world.

The following courses are now being offered for undergraduate credit:

Sociology of the Deaf: A survey of current writing on deafness. Application of sociological concepts to deafness. Students conduct a research project involving the collection of data and preparation of a report.

Principles of Audiology: An advanced course in the study of hearing and deafness. This includes consideration of anatomy and physiology of the auditory mechanism and the measurement of hearing. Medical, psychological, educational, and social aspects of deafness are explored.

Sign Language Translation for the Theatre: Creative work in different styles of signing will be composed and selected from prose, poetry, and drama for study. Translation and adaptation of a major work into a vehicle appropriate for a theatre of the deaf.

The Deaf in Literature: Concentration on works about deafness and about deaf authors; the first concentration is literature, then deafness in literature.
